Story

- ▶ As a child, Jerry was a people pleaser. He always loved making anyone he interacted with smile any way he could. That's why he knew when he grew up, he wanted to become a delivery truck driver so he could guarantee businesses got their product on time and in good condition, ensuring the happiness of the shops and customers alike. From a very young age, he saved up every extra penny he could to purchase his own truck which he used to deliver milk part-time in his hometown. Eventually, he wanted to branch out and explore the world, so he saved up his money just like he did as a kid, and used it to buy his own stock of goods which he could sell at his freshly made traveling merchant business.

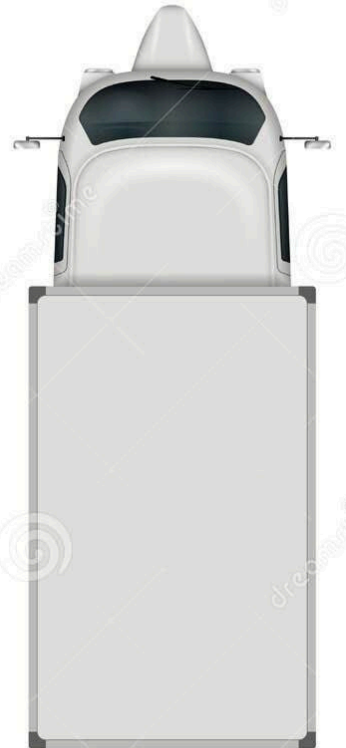

Conceptual Art

- ▶ With one of the choices being a delivery vehicle, I wanted to pick a more unique-looking one. The Japanese TukTuk has always had a fun design and so much character.

Conceptual Art

- The main TukTuk I wanted to model did not release its blueprints; therefore, I found this basic model closed-back truck. It holds the same shapes as most Tuktuks have.

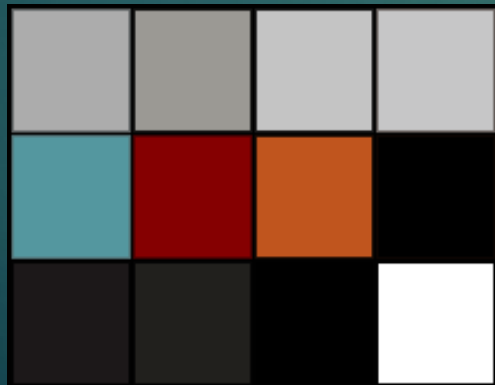

Colour Analysis

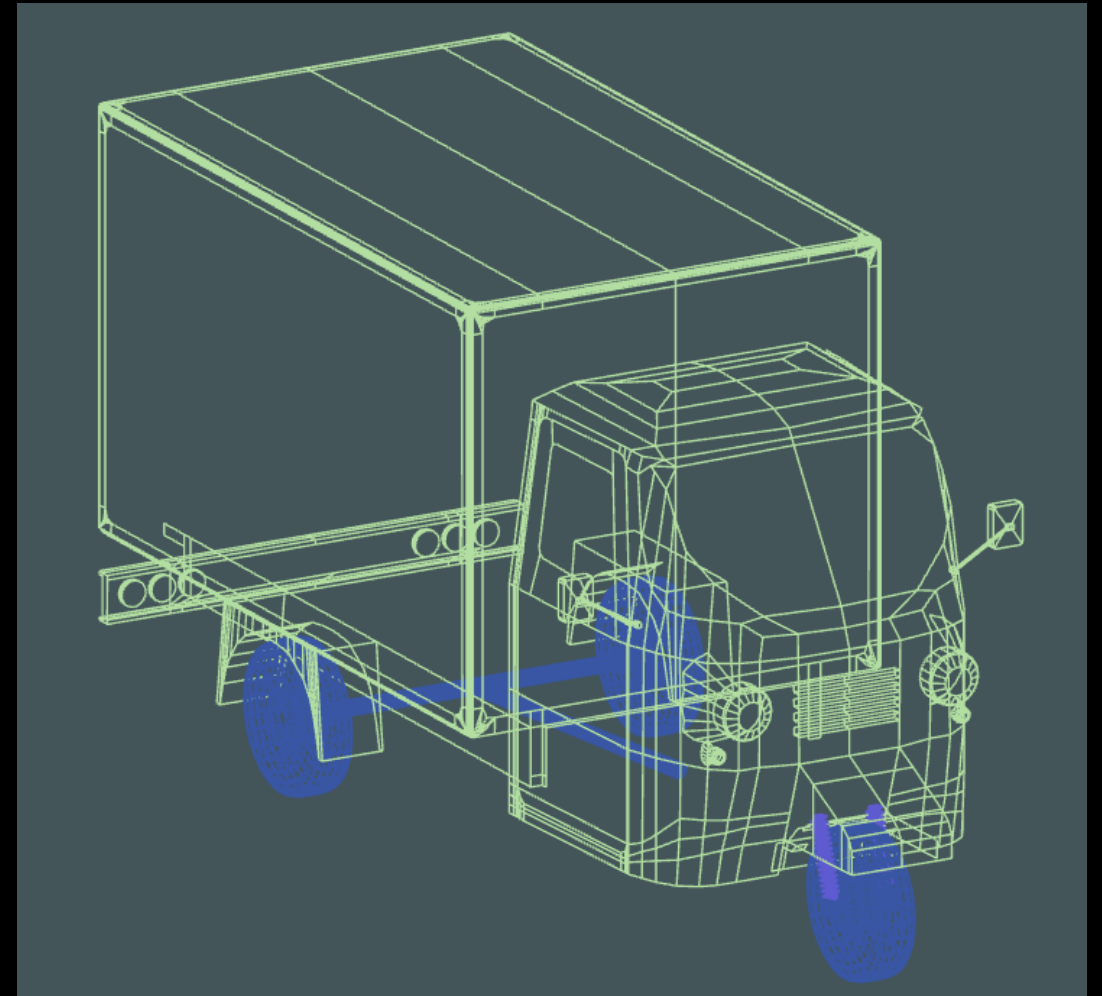

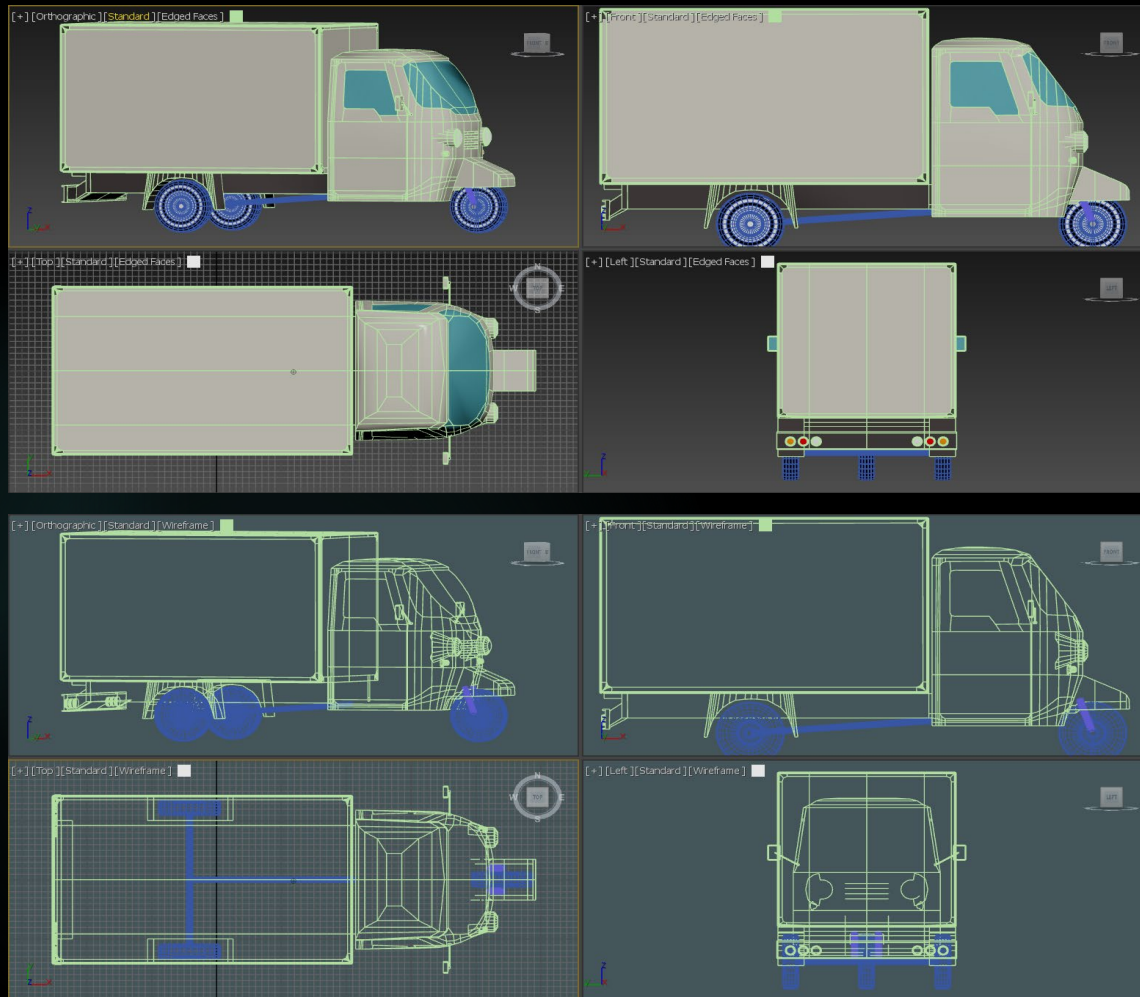

- ▶ Tuktuks when they come out of the shop, like most vehicles, are a single colour, but through years of use, they eventually get customized with stickers, repaint, wear and tear, & discolouring from the sun.

Pedestal

A samurai with a topknot and a scar on his forehead holds a katana across his face. He is in a traditional Japanese village at night, with wooden buildings and a small lantern in the background.

Style Guided

With the TukTuk being invented in the latter half of the Imperial Japan era, I wanted to make it feel right at home with buildings from the same era.
